

What is your question?

Attila was a black and white pet dog. The puppy was a couple of months old. He had pug nose, square jaws, massive head and red eyes. His appearance was formidable. He had, running in his veins, the choicest and the most ferocious blood. His pedigree sheet was stunning. Its name was kept Attila because there was a ruler of the Hunnic Empire called Attila. During his reign, he was one of the most feared enemies of the Roman Empire but the dog's name was contrary to his nature as he exhibited love for humanity. The family wanted a guard dog as there were many robberies occurring in the neighborhood but Attila was a very friendly dog. He welcomed everyone who came in the house even the strangers. When someone smiled at him, Attila would melt. When he wanted affection, he would lower his head, curve his body, tuck his tail between his legs and curve his body. He loved to eat. He was the most noiseless dog anyone could ever imagine. He loved to wander in the streets. Due to his foolishness, he became an accidental hero.

What is your question?

He is considered to be a hero by all concerned in the family and the young defender feels justified that he has stuck by Attila's side when everybody else thought him to be a poor guard dog. In reality Attila has fooled everybody by way of good fortune rather than by his abilities as a guard dog.

loyalty that Attila shows him.

The end of the story is also interesting as Narayan may be introducing an element of luck. The young defender sees Attila in the streets and only by sheer chance does he realise that Ranga is the thief who stole the jewellery from his house. Rather than seeing events as being fortunate the young defender believes that Attila has been following Ranga all the time. Considering Attila to be a detective. While the reader realises that this is not the case. Attila has shown no loyalty to his previous family or to the young defender but the young defender cannot see this. He cannot see that what has happened is purely an act of good fortune. That he has been lucky while walking through the streets to see Attila. Whose first concern was not to run to the young defender but to follow Ranga as he was running away. Regardless of this the family's faith in Attila as a guard dog is restored. Rather than viewing him as a pet who likes to have fun. Which he is. The family again bestow their trust in Attila. At the end of the story Attila can do no wrong. He is considered to be a hero by all
